WeHealth by Servier and CureMatch announce partnership to deliver a decision-support digital platform for oncologists worldwide

Paris (France), San Diego, California, United-States – 4 March 2019 - WeHealth by Servier, Servier Group's e-health department, and, CureMatch, a leader in digital health precision medicine today announced a partnership to jointly bring the CureMatch platform to oncologists, clinics and hospitals around the world.

Today, oncologists face the daunting task of understanding thousands of genomic abnormalities and hundreds of drugs in order to select treatment options for their cancer patients. Powerful new technologies like next generation sequencing have uncovered enormous heterogeneity amongst cancer patients, which tremendously complicates the decision making process. "Each cancer is like a snowflake—complex and unique," says Dr. Razelle Kurzrock, one of the world's leading precision medicine oncologists and CureMatch Founder. "Their genetic profile is unique, their tumors are unique and their treatment should account for these differences."

The innovative platform developed by CureMatch allows oncologists to reliably understand Personalized Combination Therapy® options for each individual patient based on their specific genetic profile and mutations. While medical decisions are best made between a patient and their physician, oncologists who utilize the CureMatch platform have a better likelihood of unraveling the complexity that genomics has unveiled and hence making the most informed decisions for effective therapy. "Our research indicates that tools such as the CureMatch platform are vital to the oncologist's arsenal," adds Kurzrock.

"The vision of WeHealth is to offer a precision medicine approach where the patient is at the center of an individualized diagnosis and treatment. Our collaboration with CureMatch opens a large spectrum of potential benefits for the patient and for better disease management by providing an innovative tool for oncologists," says Dr. David Guez, Director General of WeHealth by Servier.

The WeHealth by Servier/CureMatch partnership will bring the best of both worlds together in the fight against cancer. "As a small, innovative company at the leading edge of precision medicine, we know we have something special to offer, but we don't have the scale or infrastructure of a large company," says Bob Manning, CEO of CureMatch. "Our partnership with WeHealth will provide corporate size and strength to reach oncologists around the world so much faster than we ever could on our own. The power of the partnership goes beyond the power of WeHealth as it encompasses Servier's sales and marketing expertise, and provides co-development efforts around additional software development and clinical trial programs."
